CLEVELAND, WEDNESDAY MORNING, APRIL 10, 1861.

For the Leader. MORNING LEADER. WEDNESDAY MORNING, APRIL 10. BY WILFRED WYLLEYS.

O take me back to my native hills, Away from this stranger land; O let me feel on my throbbing brow The touch of my mother's hand. O | take me back from this land of flowers, This land of perpetual bloom; Its brightness falls on my weary soul, With a dreary weight of gloom. O! take me back to my native home,

By the far lake's sounding shore; I cannot die in this southern land, 'Till I've seen my home once more. O ! haste ! O! haste | ere the angel comes To summon my soul away;
Haste! bear me back to my native home,
To my home by the sobbing bay.

O! bury me there, where gentle waves Fall soft on the smooth white sand, Where breezes bear from the green robed gis The songs of my native land, O | bear me back to my native home Ere the death dews blind my eyes; O : take me far from this land of flowers; O : carry me home to die.
